BRECON COUNTY

Drivers from the Swansea area would travel via the Swansea Valley, pre-motorway days, to join the A40 at Sennybridge, carrying tin plate loads for the Midlands and North of England. Here we have three AEC Mammoth Major eight-wheeled steel waggons, a Mk V, a Mk III and a 'Tin Front' taking up the rear.

VOLVO F12

This smart 1980 Volvo F12 tipper put in many years of reliable service in the Belfast area and is seen here after being loaded at a demolition site. As well as capturing the maximum-weight artic market, Volvo also came to take a sizeable percentage of the eight-wheeler tipper sector.

YORKSHIRE DAWN

The sun struggles to break through the early morning mist in Yorkshire. The tram will be taking people to work while a delivery is being made by B.R.S. Atkinson L1586 of 1952 vintage, taking advantage of the empty road.

WHEELCHANGE

A Commer four-wheeler has pulled up, with an ERF behind. One driver is guiding the traffic through, in this case a Ford Prefect car. A bit of wood or a seat from the cab of the lorry would often be leant up against the back to warn other drivers that the vehicle had broken down.

JACOB'S LEYLAND

Before its merger with the car giant BMC, the name Leyland had an excellent reputation for well-engineered products and this 1949 22.0/1 eight-wheeler Octopus of Jacob's Biscuits typified the marque. This vehicle carried 3,000 tins of biscuits from Liverpool to London.

Nothing like hand-balling a fully loaded 40-foot trailer single-handedly, to get the blood circulating.

With shortages of raw materials, including steel, in the immediate aftermath of the Second World War, this 1946 Foden DG, working on clearing a bomb site, would have been one of the first chassis produced as the switchover from war contracts released vehicles for civilian use.
